Renishaw's position statement - reporting and restriction of PFAS in the EU and US markets.

EU PFAS proposal REACH Annex XVII

Renishaw is closely following developments of the EU's proposals on the restriction of Polyfluoroalkyl Substances (PFAS) and welcomes the move towards the use of more environmentally friendly alternatives where this can be achieved. We actively engaged in the ECHA PFAS consultation and requested derogations for certain specialist applications of PFAS materials where the use of non PFAS alternatives are not currently available. We are pleased that the revised proposal has addressed many of our concerns, creating a class for Industrial Applications and offering derogations for many of the specialist applications of interest to us. These derogations will provide time for industry to make identification and evaluation of suitable alternatives achievable. With the latest proposal in mind, we are working with our suppliers to identify PFAS content of parts and materials we use in preparation for restriction on use or reporting of PFAS. Renishaw has robust processes in place that will mitigate the impact of potential component and material obsolescence.

Proposed amendments to US TSCA Section 8(a)(7)

While working with our suppliers preparing to report PFAS content of imported articles in accordance with the requirements of the Final Rule US TSCA Section 8(a)(7) "Reporting and Recordkeeping Requirements for PFAS", Renishaw is closely monitoring development of proposed amendments to the Final Rule which remove imported articles from the reporting scope. Whatever the outcome, Renishaw will meet the requirements of the rule and make any necessary information available to our customers who require it to ensure their own compliance.

Should you have any further questions relating to the use of PFAS in Renishaw's products, please contact Productsafety@renishaw.com

Yours sincerely,
