Compliance of RLS products with RoHS Directive 2011/65/EU

Ljubljana, 11. 5. 2012

First European Directive on the restriction of the use of certain hazardous substances in electrical and electronic equipment 2002/95/EC became effective in July 2006. Since that date all listed hazardous substances were eliminated or reduced to the acceptable levels in all RLS products that are available on the EU market.

In 2011 the Directive was renewed and came into force in July 2011 as recast of RoHS Directive 2011/65/EU. According to wording of this directive all RLS product fall into category 9: Monitoring and control instruments including industrial monitoring and control instruments, without exception.

Compliance of RLS products with 2011/65/EU demands is assured by assessment of all components, material, processes and suppliers. In supply chains documentation is inspected and audits are performed. When risk cannot be mitigated otherwise testing is used.

In accordance with 2011/65/EU directive, compliance is declared by CE mark on our products.
